Risk-Taking Test

SUMMARY	INTRO	GRAPHS	DETAILED RESULTS	AREAS OF CONCERN	ADVICE
---------	-------	--------	------------------	------------------	--------

The following is a summary of the traits you possess that contribute to risk-taking, those that may be conducive to risk-taking, and those that could inhibit your desire to take risks.

Our stats show that although men are more comfortable with ambiguity, women appear to be less of a safety risk.

Traits you possess that are favorable for risk-taking

- You are a thrill-seeker, on the lookout for adventurous experiences

Traits you possess that might be conducive to risk-taking

- You can generally handle new and intense situations
- You are moderately concerned about negative consequences of your actions
- You are somewhat comfortable with ambiguity

Traits you possess that inhibit the desire to take risks

- You are conscientious
- You are afraid to take physically dangerous risks
- You do not feel comfortable taking risks with your money
- You are not very willing to take risks with your career
- You are not willing to break societal and organizational rules
